2012 PINOT NOIR
LUCKY WELL UV, SONOMA COAST

The Lucky Well Vineyard was planted in the fall of 2007 by Ulises Valdez (hence the "UV" in the wine's name) to Ehren Jordan's specifications.

The vineyard itself lies in the rolling hills 3 miles to the north of Occidental and just a few miles inland from the Pacific Ocean on the "true" Sonoma Coast. The vineyard is ideally located above the fog line to maximize sunlight for ripening, but in a cool enough location to ensure a long growing season - the perfect environment for Chardonnay. It is an organically dry-farmed vineyard with tightly planted vines, planted to the shot-wente clone.

This wine begins with raspberry and warming notes of cherry pie, baked cranberry and blackberry cobbler. The finish is vibrant and focused due to its bright acidity. This is what we consider classic Sonoma Coast Pinot Noir. Each sip invites the next. Lucky Well? Lucky indeed!
